Excerpt: . . . services within their correctional system. The plans also helped them develop appropriate short-and long-range strategies for service enhancement. New service delivery models were created that enhanced continuity of treatment so that programming begun in a given institution could continue after participants were re-leased into the community. These models included ways of developing contracts with community programs to provide counseling and treatment planning assistance to offenders who were approaching their release date and providing resi-dential and out-patient treatment after discharge and or pa-role to the community. RECOVERY Follows The focus shifted in 1991 to the new Center for Substance Abuse Treatment ( formerly known as the Office for Treat-ment Improvement ), which established Project RECOV-ERY. RECOVERY provided technical assistance and training services to pilot prison drug treatment programs and continued the work begun by REFORM. Most of the States that originally participated in REFORM became in-volved in RECOVERY, and an additional seven States that had completed comprehensive correctional treatment plans 5 were added ( Infra, p. 19 ). 9 This item ships from La Vergne,TN.
