Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Medical and Surgical Reporter (Philadelphia), 1876, Vol. 30 From letters of inquiry which I am receiving from widely distributed portions of this country, I am led to infer that a few hints with regard to the treatment and the prevention of the more ordinary forms of uterine disorders will not come amiss to some of the many readers of this journal. In order, however, to make these hints as practical as possible, this paper will be made up mainly of categorical answers to the leading questions of my correspondents. But for this very reason it will necessarily be somewhat dogmatic as well as desultory in its character; and will also, I fear, compel the frequent use of the first person, an egotism for which, in advance, I ask indulgence. Instruments. - The instruments which I recommend the students of the University to purchase at the outset of their practice areas follows: - One base-expanding bivalve speculum (a modification of Smith s), whose blades are three inches and three-quarters long, and one inch and a quarter wide. Two glass speculums (Fergusson s), the one not longer than five inches and three-quarters, with the smaller aperture measuring one inch and a quarter in diameter; the other five inches long, and at the smaller aperture seven-eighths of an inch wide. Two probes or applicators, of aluminium wire, with one adjustable handle. One uterine tenaculum. One small volsella forceps. One speculum forceps. One uterine sound. One uterine repositor. One hard rubber uterine syringe with a long and flexible nozzle. One uterine dilator. This list by no means exhausts the number of instruments required for special cases of uterine disease....
