Excerpt from The Junior Highway to English: A Text Book for the Seventh and Eight Years Frequently during the year when we compiled the Junior Highway we breathed a thanksgiving of this sort: Now we have something to work with in our own classes. If two men of such different temperaments, with such different experiences, in such different schools, were so agreed about their needs, there must be at least a few hundred teachers in the country who will feel as we do about having something to work with. We believe that our unfailing agreement is a proof that the book will be serviceable in many places. One of us gained his experience in the public school system of Iowa, acquiring a knowledge of junior high school conditions by laboring in the junior high; the other learned his trade in Connecticut, where he taught eighth-year boys from nearly every state in the Union and from all sorts of schools. We prepared ourselves for text-making by trying to earn salaries in the seventh and eighth years. Since the two...
